What to Expect

Hiring an event speaker is a big deal. I get that.

As both an entrepreneur, conference director, and women's ministry leader, I understand the importance of finding the perfect speaker/teacher for your event. That is why I work tirelessly with you and your staff to shape a presentation that suits your event. Knowing that expectation is a big part of your decision, I want you to know exactly what to expect from me:

Energy, Enthusiasm, Experience and Empathic Connection

I've been described as the Energizer Bunny, the life of the party, and someone who can both make you cry and laugh all at the same time. Personality testing types me a Sanguine (The Four Temperaments), a "Two with a Three Wing (Enneagram), and ENFJ-T, The Protagonist (Myers-Briggs). My peers and professional liaisons describe me as wise, caring, spiritually intuitive and often, a bit too serious and deep. As an author and speaker/teacher, I believe I embrace the best of both worlds: introverted and reflective; extroverted and expressive.

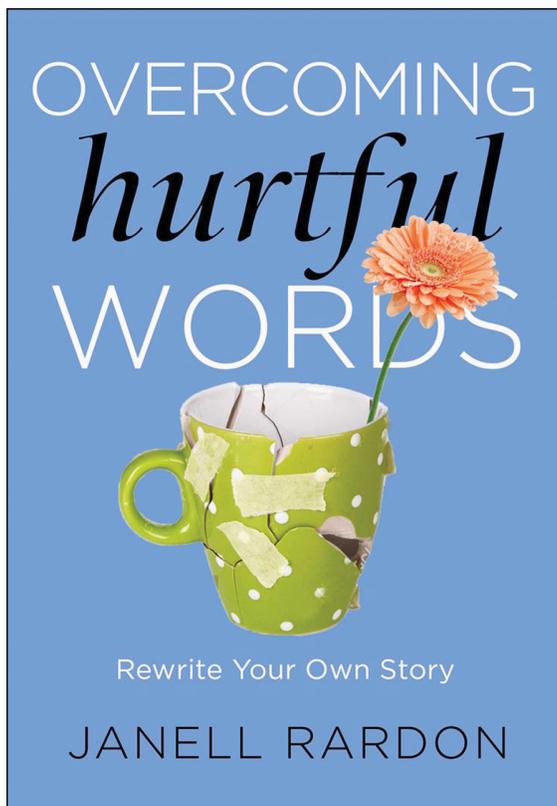

"Perhaps one of my most favorite teaching moments was in Kenya. Sitting under a tin roof. Torrential downpour. Surrounded by twelve remarkable Kenyan mamas. Learning about God's love. Heaven on earth."

Hearts matter. Life is too short to waste entangled in crushing words. The pain inside your heart can be turned into something unimaginably powerful—an expansion of your heart's capacity and potential to live out its God-breathed purpose. Develop healthy behavior patterns and communication skills that will improve every single aspect of your life, family, ministry or corporate environment.

My newest book, Overcoming Hurtful Words: Rewrite Your Own Story, offers nine practices that can be individually developed into a powerful keynote, a conference breakout session, highly-practical staff training, wise and empathic leadership development seminars, corporate fundraising speeches or the basis for a complete weekend retreat. With candor, humor and solid teaching/sharing, I will do my best to help create a memorable and meaningful event.
